RISK INDICATOR

This has been classified a 2 out of 7, which is a low risk class, assuming the product is held for 5 years. This rates the potential losses from future performance at a low level, and poor market conditions are very unlikely to impact the capacity of the Fund to pay you. The risk rating is calculated using simulated historical data before the Fund's launch and may change once sufficient live performance becomes available

This information is a marketing communication. Past performance is not a reliable indicator of future results. The value of investments and any income arising may fall as well as rise and investors may not get back the amount originally invested. Changes in exchange rates may also cause the value of investments to fluctuate. Derivative risk is derived from FX forwards used for share class currency hedging only.

INVESTMENT COMMENTARY

The Fund declined -2.23% in March, against a backdrop of exceptionally challenging market conditions driven by the escalation of the US–Iran conflict and its cross-asset implications. The month was characterised by a sharp increase in geopolitical risk premia, most visibly in the energy complex. Disruptions around the Strait of Hormuz drove a spike in oil prices, contributing to renewed inflation uncertainty. This fed through into higher bond yields and widening credit spreads, particularly across more cyclical segments of the market.

March also saw a breakdown in traditional cross-asset correlations. Unlike prior risk-off episodes, equities and government bonds did not provide consistent diversification, with bonds selling off alongside equities as inflation expectations repriced higher. This unstable correlation regime created a difficult backdrop for both directional and relative value strategies.

Despite this, underlying strategies performed broadly in line with their risk-adjusted expectations. Return dispersion across strategies remained elevated, reflecting the idiosyncratic nature of market moves driven by geopolitical developments and shifting policy expectations. In this context, the Fund’s diversified multi-strategy framework proved valuable in helping to mitigate overall drawdowns.

Looking ahead, elevated volatility, macro uncertainty and shifting correlations are likely to persist, continuing to expand the opportunity set for active managers. The portfolio remains focused on navigating this environment with disciplined risk management and a commitment to consistent risk-adjusted returns.
