OCTOBER 2026

FP APOLLO MULTI ASSET CAUTIOUS FUND

FUND AIMS

The Fund aims to achieve a positive return over a rolling period of 5 years, which is 3% (net of fees) above normal cash deposit rates. For these purposes, normal cash deposit rates should be taken to mean the UK Operational Standing Deposit Facility Rate. The Fund will pursue a cautious investment strategy and can invest indirectly (via collective investment schemes, investment trusts and exchange traded funds) in a range of assets including listed shares, fixed interest securities, money market instruments and cash/deposits. The Fund may also seek investment diversification by obtaining indirect exposure to alternative asset classes including hedge funds, private equity, commodities and indirectly in property.

FUND REVIEW AND OUTLOOK

The FP Apollo Multi Asset Cautious Fund was down -0.77% in October, as markets faced a more challenging combination of geopolitical, inflationary and fiscal concerns. Investor sentiment was unsettled by renewed tensions in the Middle East, which pushed oil prices higher and raised questions over the persistence of inflation and the scope for further monetary easing. At the same time, uncertainty around the longer-term direction of government bond yields remained elevated, with concerns over the sustainability of US fiscal deficits, rising government borrowing requirements and the potential implications of November's US mid-term elections adding to market nervousness. These factors contributed to bouts of volatility across both equity and fixed income markets.

Equity markets also experienced a notable change in leadership. Concerns around the scale of investment in artificial intelligence and the potential returns from technology-related capital expenditure triggered a correction in technology-heavy markets, particularly across Asia. Emerging markets and Asian equities were among the weaker areas of the portfolio, while commodity-related investments also struggled. The BlackRock World Mining Trust was a notable detractor, while Fidelity Asia Pacific Opportunities also experienced a difficult month, reflecting the wider pressure on Asian markets. The portfolio's smaller company exposure proved more resilient, with Aberforth Smaller Companies Trust delivering a positive return of 3.41%. European equities also provided some support.

Within fixed income, the uncertain outlook for inflation and longer-term yields continued to create a mixed environment. Short-duration and liquidity holdings provided some stability, while selected global income and strategic bond strategies made positive contributions. Alternative investments also demonstrated some resilience, although the Apollo Diversified Multi-Strategy Fund experienced a modest decline.

Overall, October reinforced the importance of maintaining diversification across regions, asset classes and investment styles. With fiscal pressures, geopolitical uncertainty and the inflationary implications of higher energy prices likely to remain important market considerations, the path for both bond yields and equity valuations remains uncertain. We continue to favour a selective approach, retaining exposure to attractive longer-term opportunities across Asia, emerging markets and smaller companies, alongside genuinely diversifying alternative strategies. Our focus remains on balancing participation in future growth opportunities with valuation discipline and effective risk management.

RISK PROFILE

1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9	10

Fund has been assigned a risk category of 4 which categorises an investor with a low attitude to accepting risk, who is concerned about the possibility of losing money but does not want to completely ignore the possibility of making higher returns. The investor will probably want greater returns than are offered by bank accounts and other low risk investments. Consequently, the investor will be prepared to accept some fluctuation in the value of their capital and accept that they could make a loss on the amount invested, particularly in the short term.
